Farnham Castle, his nome near Guildford, is a wonderfully picturesque old place; first built by King Stephen's brother, Henry Du Biols, Bishop of Winchester; besieged and hadly damaged by Oliver Cromwell and his troops in 1842 and tastefully restored by George Morley, Bishop of Winchester, in the reign of Charles II. It is surrounded by a beautiful park, at the gates of which is the town of Farnham, which seems to have grown up around the castle of the Bishop of Winchester.
I may add that prior to the building of the castle seven hundred years ago,
its site was occupied by a manor house, which was even then the residence of the Bishops of Winchester, in whose Cathedral Church King Alfred the

ture 98 Spiritual Loros of Farmanatter rank with the barons. The stipend attached to his See is something over $30,000. But there are so many demands upon his purse in the shape of charities, and also in connection with the upkeep of his stately official residence, Farnham Castle, in Surrey, that it is only a man with some private fortune of his own who can afford to eccupy this See.

The present Bishop of Winchester was one of Queen Victoria's favorite chaplains, was for twenty years Warden of Keble College, at Oxford, and was translated from the Bishopric of Southwark to that of Winchester last year. He is married to the Hon. Laving Lyttleton, sister of General King Alfonso's elder sister elso died very unexpectedly, at a moment when Alfonso's treatment of his wife and of his mother. Indeed, since Ferdinand with his wife and children lived both at Madrid and at San Sebastian under the same roof with King Alfonso and the Queen Mother Christina, it is to the last degree improbable that he would have ventured on any misconduct towards his wife, and there is every reason to believe that their marriage was wholly unclouded. His three children are in the line of succession to the throne, coming, however, after the two children of the late Infanta Mercedes, and of course after all the children of the King and Queen of Spain.

Queen of Spain.

The great Field Marshal Von Moltke was amous for his taciturnity, and for the rarity of his words. His nephew, General Julius von Moltke, his most recent successor as Chief of the General Staff of the General Staff of the General aways has an appearance not only of profound gloom, but even of downright misery, impressed upon his countenance. To such an extent is this the case that the Kaiser always addresses and speaks of him as "Der traurige Juliua," which may be translated as "the gloomy Juliua." There is, it must be confessed some reason for this gloom. For the Emperor is a difficult man to satisfy in military matters and the general is perfectly matters and the general is perfectly

Quarterly Receipts Drop Off Because Many Distilleries

It was announced yesterday that in-dications point to a decrease of $125, 000 in the receipts in the Richmond district, United States Internal Revedistrict, United States Internal Revenue Department, for the quarter ending September 30. As the quarter ends on Monday, the exact decrease of receipts as compared with 1911 cannot be known at this time, but Collector M. K. Lowry gave $125,000 as the approximate difference, the receipts of the Richmond office for July, August and September of 1911 were $1,720,434, while the same months of 1912 will yield a revenue of about $1,596,000.

The bare figures are not as discouraging as they seem on the face.

The bare ngures are not as an-couraging as they seem on the face. The principal reason for the decrease is the fact that every distillery in the Richmond district is closed down at this time, and the majority of them Richmond district is closed down at this time, and the majority of them have not been in operation during the quarter. Added to this are the changes in the tobacco and cigarette industry of Richmond incident to the dissolution of the tobacco trust and the subsequent transfer of business from this district to factories in other States.

When it is realized that there have been as many as thirty distillerles running at one time in the second district, yielding a heavy tax to the Richmond Internal revenue pffice, it is easily understood what a financial loss the shutting down of these thirty plants involves. Several of the smaller distillerles have been acred by revenue officers for violations of the Federal statutes, some have been absorbed by the larger companies, some of which have gone to the wall, while the others are shut down for repairs. The Richmond Distiflery, the last in the district to close down, ceased operations only ten days ago.

Shat-Bown to Temperary.

Collector Lowry says that in most instances the shutting down of these plants is temporary. Distillers agree in the assertion that less spirits per bushel can be obtained in summer than in winter, and for that reason they pick the number of distilleries in this district are enlarging extensively, and when all are actively at work again the revenue will be larger than ever. Some of the combecated plants have settled their cates.
